

Appendix 28:

<http://daily>

Kano leaders sleepless over rising crime rate

¹Boer: It is interesting that the police in Vancouver, Canada, my city of residence, have similar complaints about their judiciary, that has allegedly developed the “revolving door” system, whereby arrested repeat criminals appear back on the street within a day or two after their arrest. One knowledgeable person hinted that the reason for this revolving door is that some judges are themselves involved in the underworld of drugs either by consumption or bribery. Threats and fear are also factors.